ABSTRACT

Surveys of both the 1979 and 1980 graduating classes at Greenfield Community College (GCC) were conducted during graduation rehearsals to gather a variety of information on their plans, experiences at GCC, and backgrounds. The survey instrument asked students to indicate: (1) the number of semesters they attended GCC; (2) their primary educational objectives; (3) their immediate future plans; (4) problems experienced in transferring credit; (5) their academic degree aspirations; (6) their perceptions of class scheduling and location; (7) influences on their college choice; (8) whether they would recommend their courses; (9) residence plans; (10) financial dependence on their parents and family income; (11) means of transportation; (12) the number of children in their family; (13) if they received financial aid; and (14) the educational background of their parents. The surveys achieved a 58% response rate from the 1979 class (N=345) and a 60% response rate from the 1980 class (N=369). The survey report compares the responses of both classes to each item on the questionnaire and provides background information on the school, its service area, and the manner in which the data would be used. A supplementary report analyzes the responses of the 1980 class in terms of their program area and provides a list of the employers and job titles of the employed 1980 graduates. (JP)

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This is another in a series of activities initiated by Nancy L. Goodwin since she assumed the Presidency of Greenfield Community College in August of 1978.

This report was developed with the help of many people. Merryl Sackin and Sharon Fiske helped to administer the survey during the graduating rehearsal exercise and assisted in the follow-up mailing to those graduates who did not participate in the rehearsal exercise. Beryl Berndt, Joanne Shaw, Beryl Holloway, and Jane Filkins provided assistance and obtained the necessary information to complete this report. A special note of thanks goes to the Graduating Class of 1980 for completing this survey.

The information in this report is utilized by the faculty, staff, and administration of GCC to plan ahead and improve the services that we provide to the students of GCC and to the community.

SUMMARY

- 36% of the graduates expected to be living in Franklin County at the end of five years.

- 62% of the graduates have lived in Franklin County three of more years.

- 37% of the graduates who responded planned to continue their education.

- 51% planned to work full or part time.

- 36% of the graduates heard about Greenfield Community College from former GCC students.

WHAT IS GREENFIELD COMMUNITY COLLEGE?

Greenfield Community College is an institution of public higher education that is "the college of the community" for Franklin County, the most rural county in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Greenfield Community College is located in Western Massachusetts at the base of the Mohawk Trail. It is characterized by the students as "a friendly place, located in a country atmosphere, where students get a good education by people who really care about them, in a school that is supportive of the career and personal needs."

THE COLLEGE OF THE COMMUNITY

Greenfield Community College is one of the largest employers in Franklin County and utilizes over 15% of all currently existing business and industrial establishments as part of student based learning experiences for cooperative education programs.

Over 20,000 people utilize the Greenfield Community College campus annually for a variety of reasons in addition to credit and non-credit day and evening courses. Greenfield Community College is actively involved in community activities and strives to better serve the student and community needs.

THE STUDENTS AND THE COMMUNITY

The students who attend Greenfield Community College are composed primarily of long term residents of Franklin County. Over half (53-56%) of all our students have lived in Franklin County for six years or more. Another 9-17% have lived in the county from 3-6 years. That information, coupled with the knowledge that 36% of the graduates plan to remain in Franklin County over the next five years, with another 15-16% who plan to remain in western Massachusetts, is clear evidence that GCC is an integral part of the community. Approximately 30% of the graduates plan to leave the Commonwealth of Massachusetts during the next five years.

From an economic standpoint, the public funds utilized to educate and train the students of GCC are going back into the economy of Massachusetts in the form of manpower development, income taxes, sales taxes, property taxes, and other related economic benefits.

Of importance in non-economic terms is the "quality of life" that is gained by Greenfield Community College graduates in the areas of social, cultural, civic, and personal growth.

THE COMMUNITY NEEDS ASSESSMENT

In the summer of 1979, 1,200 people were randomly selected to participate in a community needs assessment that was sponsored by The Franklin County Planners Office, the Town of Greenfield, and the Franklin County Public Hospital in conjunction with Greenfield Community College.

The results of the survey indicated that:

-42% of the people surveyed had attended Greenfield Community College.

-74% had been on the GCC campus.

-96% of the people said their impression of GCC was good to excellent.

-77% of the people said that they would recommend GCC to a friend.

Greenfield Community College has a demonstrated record of active community involvement. As the only higher education institution in Franklin County, the constituency of the county is placing more emphasis on the role of the College in meeting their cultural, educational, social, civil and training needs.

HOW IS THE DATA UTILIZED?

The data in this report is utilized in a variety of ways. Each of the faculty, staff, and administrators at GCC receives this report. They utilize the information for planning, evaluation and review purposes at the individual and program levels. In addition to the actions that occur at the individual or departmental level, the report is utilized as part of the data base of information that results in the formulation of Institutional Goals and Objectives that are developed at an annual Retreat/Planning Session that is composed of faculty, staff, and the administration of Greenfield Community College.

GCC is currently implementing its second yearly cycle of institutional goals and objectives and is making plans to develop its third yearly cycle during the summer of 1980. The total process that is evolving is known as "The Greenfield Plan: An Approach to Organizational Development." It is a process of utilizing data for decision through a participatory decision making process.

Other data sources utilized as part of our organizational development are:

-Committee and Task Force reports and recommendations on the Institutional Goals and Objectives.

-Community College Goals Inventory (conducted in conjunction with the Educational Testing Service).

-Community Needs Assessment Data.

-College reports from various programs and departments.

-Input from the College constituency.

These data sources, in addition to the information that is gathered from the participants prior to the Retreat/Planning Session, assures Greenfield Community College that the Institutional Goals and Objectives accurately reflect student and community needs.

METHODOLOGY

This report represents two separate graduating classes. Each of the classes was administered a questionnaire during the graduation rehearsal exercise. Those persons who did not attend the rehearsal were subsequently mailed a follow-up questionnaire. Merryl Sackin and Sharon Fiske from the Student Activities Office were extremely helpful in the administration process.

INTRODUCTION

This is a supplement to the comparative follow-up report of the graduates of Greenfield Community College's Class of 1979 and Class of 1980.

The report provides data that is broken down by program areas for the graduates of the Class of 1980 only. It was assembled in response to the requests for more information from faculty, staff, and administration on a program by program basis.

The information in this report is a component of "The Greenfield Plan." The plan is a model of organizational development. Other parts of the plan include the development of institutional goals and objectives through a participatory decision making process at an annual summer retreat/planning session. GCC is currently implementing its second yearly cycle of institutional goals and objectives.
